

Introduction

The purpose of the fourth edition of the Multisensory Teaching of Basic Language Skills Activity Book is to help reinforce the information gained during teacher preparation from texts, classroom lectures, and practicums. These activities provide teachers with opportunities to reflect on and assimilate newly acquired linguistic concepts, along with a check of their knowledge and practice skills for teaching Structured Literacy that are aligned with Knowledge and Practice Standards for Teachers of Reading (International Dyslexia Association [IDA], 2018). In addition, the activities can act as a platform from which to plan lessons with these concepts for their students.

Teacher knowledge is essential to student success (Brady & Moats, 1997; IDA, 2018; Piasta, Connor, Fishman, & Morrison, 2009). Teachers must understand the theoretical underpinnings of literacy acquisition. They must know effective methods for teaching literacy skills and ways to differentiate their instruction to meet the needs of all students. Teachers themselves must possess underlying linguistic skills and insights about different language structures so that they can successfully instruct their students. The textbook Multisensory Teaching of Basic Language Skills, Fourth Edition (Birsh & Carreker, 2018), provides teachers with current research findings and specific multisensory methods of instruction in all areas of literacy. This activity book is a supplement to that textbook and contains activities that reinforce and extend the information presented in it. The activities are designed to target and refine necessary linguistic skills and insights about language structures that teachers need to know to ensure that their students know them, too. In addition, the activities are also coordinated with Chapters 3-8 of the textbook Becoming a Professional Reading Teacher (Aaron, Joshi, & Quatroche, 2008).

The section "Activities Arranged by Structured Literacy Components" on the following pages coordinates the activities in the workbook with the chapters in the Birsh and Carreker (2018) textbook. Readers can progress through the chapters in that textbook and, as they finish each chapter, complete the activities that relate to that chapter, or readers can complete the exercises in this activity book in order and then read and refer to the related chapters in the textbook. For each activity, an icon appearing at the top right corner indicates the chapter(s) from the textbook that would be particularly helpful for users to refer to while completing the activity. Some activities also include referrals to a teacher web site that offer readers demonstrations of teachers engaged in teaching those concepts.

All of the activities are designed to enhance teachers' knowledge base. The reason some activities, purposefully, have more than one chapter reference is that knowledge about Structured Literacy overlaps from content area to content area, reinforcing the interrelatedness of the information. Some activities can be adapted for use with students. For example, interspersed among the activities are 19 Try This exercises designed specifically for use with students in the classroom or small-group settings. Furthermore, Appendixes A-O contain many resources teachers can use to enhance their own understanding of linguistic concepts and their presentation to their students. There are reproducible games, charts, graphic organizers, word lists, comprehension passages, and templates for lesson plans. The appendices included with the print book are also available as Online Companion Materials (OCM) on the companion web site for this book at www.brookespublishing.com/carreker/materials for both print and e-book buyers. Finally, there is an Answer Key for all of the activities so that teachers can check their understanding while they are learning new skills.

A guide to activities coordinated with the Aaron et al. (2008) textbook can be found at the end of the Answer Key.

NOTE TO MULTISENSORY STRUCTURED LANGUAGE EDUCATORS

Some of the activities in the workbook share the same title. For example, Activities 17 and 18 are both titled Phoneme Checklist. In a training setting, participants complete the first activity for practice. The second activity with the same title could be completed as an assessment.

ACTIVITY 6

What Children Know and What They Can Explore

Think about two subjects. Brainstorm things preschool children might know about the subject and what they might like to explore about the subject. An example is provided for you.

Subject	What children know	What children can explore
Squirrels	Squirrels are grey.	Where do squirrels live?
	They hop.	Can we find baby squirrels?
	They're good jumpers.	When they jump from tree to tree do they ever fall?
	They eat acorns.	Why are their tails so big?
Birds	Birds have feathers.	Do all birds have feathers?
	They make different sounds.	What birds live near our playground?
	They have two wings.	Can all birds fly?
	Birds fly in the air.	Where are the birds going that fly in big groups?
