Lindamood® Phoneme Sequencing Program (LiPS)

The Lindamood Phoneme Sequencing® Program for Reading, Spelling, and Speech, 4th Edition is a comprehensive multisensory program that uses explicit, systematic instruction to develop phonological awareness, decoding, spelling, and reading skills. The LiPS® Program provides phonics instruction to help students establish phonemic awareness: an essential base for reading, spelling, and speech. Weak phonemic awareness can cause problems in spelling and decoding, when students may add, omit, substitute, or reverse sounds and letters within words.

The LiPS Program enables self-correction in spoken and written language. Using it, you'll begin at the oral level with problem-solving activities and extend to multisyllabic and contextual levels of reading and spelling.

The LiPS Program was first published in 1969 (as the Auditory Discrimination in Depth Program) and the past four decades have seen reading research "catch up" with its groundbreaking instruction. The program is still valuable today, particularly for students with severely undeveloped phonemic awareness.

How is the LiPS® Program unique?

Unlike many phonics programs, which start with activities that require rather than develop phonemic awareness, the LiPS Program first helps students explore phonemes through the oral-motor movements that produce the sounds. This emphasis allows students to hear, see, and feel the physical characteristics of phonemes, and the contrasts between them. Students thus establish a system of sensory feedback that helps them succeed in the higher levels of LiPS phonics instruction.

"The contribution of the LiPS Program is the development of an oral-motor, visual, and auditory feedback system that enables all students to prove the identity, number, and order of phonemes in syllables and words. It is more basic and more extensive than traditional phonics programs." - Patricia Lindamood & Phyllis Lindamood

Can the LiPS® Program help your students?

The LiPS Program is successful in developing students' conscious awareness of the most basic elements of oral and written language; phonemes and syllables; and can form a core part of any reading or language-arts curriculum. The LiPS Program can also be used for remedial or intervention instruction, even for students with severely undeveloped phonemic awareness. With LiPs you can:

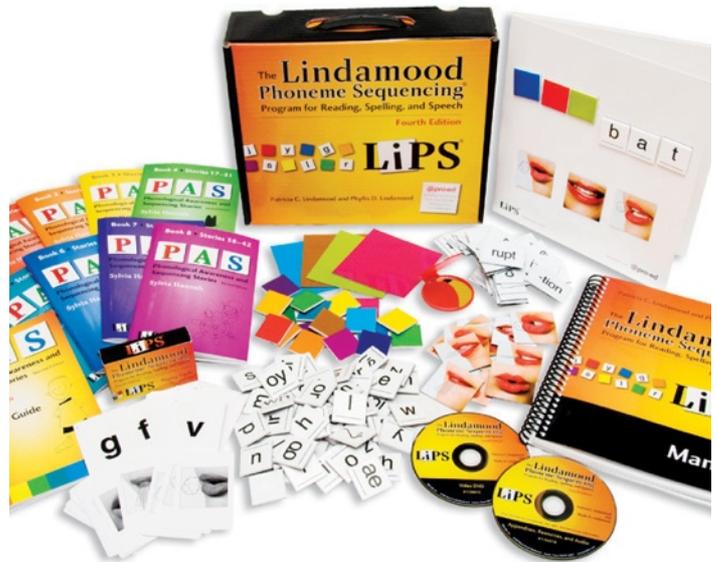

- Preventatively address the differences that exist in how individuals are genetically "wired" for phonemic awareness.
- Establish a hierarchy of processing ability that moves students in such small steps that even individuals with severe weakness advance from lower, concrete levels to higher, abstract levels of thinking.
- Teach students to use sensory information from feeling, seeing, and hearing to develop a feedback system that promotes self-correction in speech, reading, and spelling.
- Save time, work, and money because the procedures prevent failure for at-risk students. The procedures also markedly accelerate the reading and spelling development of students genetically endowed with phonemic awareness and help them become independent learners earlier in their academic experience.
