

chapter one

Bugs

Two billion people around the world eat bugs. Some people live in warm weather. They're more likely to eat bugs. Bugs like warm weather. Beetles, caterpillars, bees, wasps, and ants are the most popular.

Rose Wang and Laura D'Asaro are Americans. They sell food made from bugs. They grinded roasted crickets. They combined them with bean flour. They made chips. They called them Chirps.

Many people choose to eat bugs. Some Thai people fry scorpions. Some

Some people farm bugs for food.

Mexicans dip locusts in chocolate. Some Chinese boil water bugs. Some Ghanians bake termites into bread.