

Wolves eat anything to survive. They eat animals eight times bigger. They hunt large deer, moose, or elk. They hunt as a pack. They pick prey. They run it down. They attack from all sides. They rip away legs. They rip at the guts. They wait for prey to fall down. Then they eat right away. They eat prey while it is still alive.

In some places, wolves are needed for balance. Lots of moose cause problems. Wolves are needed to eat some. They eat moose in their area. They eat almost 50 moose each year. Lots of wolves cause problems too. They eat too much! There needs to be balance.
