

Esports

Streaming services have helped make esports popular. The “e” in esports stands for electronic. Esports are organized video gaming competitions. They’ve turned expert gamers into famous stars.

Professional gamers practice. They form teams. They face off with other teams. They compete in tournaments. Tournaments are series of games. People compete for a big prize.

Esports have millions of fans around the world. Fans watch streaming videos. They watch on Twitch or YouTube. They also play live.

Professional sports organizations form esports teams. For example, the Minnesota Vikings are a professional American football team. In 2019, the owners of the Vikings created a new professional esports team. Over 50 colleges have these teams.

The League of Legends World Championship is like the Super Bowl of video games.